Assist the teacher by translating concepts/language into Cantonese or Mandarin

In My Class Coaches Can Best Help By

Being flexible, helpful and very patient to work with Literacy students.

Being willing to work with and support a range of students, some with very limited school background.

In My Class I Don't Want Coaches To

Required Language Skills and or Qualifications

It is very important to have a coach/coaches who speak Cantonese and or Mandarin, as I have students who speak both languages in my class.

Preferred Language Skills and or Qualifications

Special Needs and or Class Considerations or Challenges

Just that coaches be very patient and willing to work with students who are learning language at the lowest level; also, the class pace moves very slowly with a lot of repetition, so hopefully a coach is comfortable in this kind of learning environment, too.

I am putting down that we can have more than one coach per day but I think it's probably overkill to have more than one coach. However, there are a couple students who seem to be close to literacy level and we don't have a literacy class in this time slot at our campus, so a second coach to work with them on a regular basis would be nice, if possible

In My Class Coaches Usually:

Might have a chance to give a dictation or similar structured activity with the class.

Work in a variety of modalities, depending on the need.

Might have a chance to develop and use their own materials.

Work with small groups.

Assist with the entire class, moving around helping individuals as needed.
do a variety of activities

In My Class Coaches Can Best Help By

talking with lots of different students during conversation activities, asking me questions if they don't understand something or need help with a student, are enthusiastic and smile a lot

use their phones, chew gum, do their own work

Required Language Skills and or Qualifications

Familiarity with the grammar taught. They should check the grammar requirements on the course outline and see if they are comfortable. They don't have to be perfect, but they should have some knowledge of the grammar I'll be teaching. They can always ask me to clarify something if needed.

Preferred Language Skills and or Qualifications

This is a fairly high class, so coaches should have strong English ability

Any other language is fine

Tuesday	Yes	Friday	Yes			Maximum Coaches Per Week	3
Wednesday	Yes	Saturday	No			Estimated Class Size	40

Please note: Your system doesn't have our JAD class times. The class starts at 10:15 and ends at 11:55.

In My Class Coaches Usually:

Work with small groups.

Assist with the entire class, moving around helping individuals as needed. assist students as they do pair work or group work. This involves listening to make sure that students are on task, and stepping in when necessary to correct grammar, vocabulary or pronunciation mistakes. Helping with pronunciation involves not only individual sounds but also stressing key words and using appropriate intonation. Sometimes a coach models a conversation with me, especially conversations written out in our textbook.

In My Class Coaches Can Best Help By

encouraging the students; correcting their mistakes, especially pronunciation, gently but clearly; eliciting answers from students when possible (as opposed to handing them answers).

In My Class I Don't Want Coaches To

speak the students' first language; allow any student to monopolize them; show impatience; eat, drink use a cell phone or do homework – or fail to show up!

Required Language Skills and or Qualifications

This is about character, not language, but there's nowhere else to write it. They need to take this responsibility seriously, and put their hearts into it – even if they're doing it mainly/only to get extra credit.

Preferred Language Skills and or Qualifications

I love native speakers; however, non-native speakers with clear, correct pronunciation are great because they are role models. Coaches who have their own pronunciation issues are not useful because we really stress pronunciation practice.

It's great if they're able to explain grammar. But if they're native speakers with little conscious knowledge of grammar, they'll need to pay attention when I explain grammar to the students, so that when they work with the students individually, they can repeat what they heard me say!

I'm not interested in coaches' bilingual skills.

Special Needs and or Class Considerations or Challenges

There are lots of Chinese speakers and a number of Russian speakers and Spanish speakers. I'll ask the coaches to stay alert (with me) about separating speakers of the same L1 in pair work, or when that's not possible (because over half the students are Chinese), at least to stop them from using their L1.

Preferred Language Skills and or Qualifications

Spanish is helpful but not necessary. Depending on the make-up of the class, knowledge of other languages (Arabic, Chinese, Vietnamese) may also prove helpful.

Special Needs and or Class Considerations or Challenges

This is officially a literacy class; many of the students are not only unfamiliar with English, but are not very experienced reading and writing in their native languages.

However, to increase enrollment, we are now admitting many Level 1 students - regardless of their educational level - into the class. So, in reality, it's a multi-level class. SHINE coaches will be helpful in meeting the students' needs at varied levels.

listening carefully to the point of the lesson, and only helping students with that, or other related points, but not getting off topic.

In My Class I Don't Want Coaches To

look at their cell phones ever! Also, it's really important than when I call the class back to attention, that the coach also immediately stops helping and turns her/his attention to me to see what's next.

Required Language Skills and or Qualifications

I need native English speakers or very advanced/fluent second language speakers. It doesn't work to have English students helping.

Preferred Language Skills and or Qualifications

Spanish is great, Chinese or Arabic too. I have just one Arabic speaker, but I know if I had an Arabic speaking coach that more would come!
